Dillon Papier is a typical energetic seven-year-old boy in many ways. His dazzling smile, fun-loving personality and extraordinary zest for life make a lasting impression. Dillon attends Centerville Elementary School in Frederick, MD. He loves to have fun with his family and hang out with his buddies, go to parties, eat yummy treats and dance up a storm. Above all, Dillon lives and breathes baseball! When he's not watching baseball or talking about baseball, Dillon can be found playing baseball with his Little League team. He enjoys sharing his vast collection of baseball memorabilia with everyone, but most of all, he never tires of practicing his southpaw swing with his daddy. All winter Dillon looks forward to baseball season and anxiously awaits his annual family trip to Florida to visit his two favorite teams, the Baltimore Orioles and the Washington Nationals, during their spring training.

However, one thing sets Dillon apart from other kids his age. Dillon has Niemann-Pick Disease Type C. This rare, genetic disorder will progressively rob Dillon of his ability to walk, his ability to talk, his ability to swallow, and ultimately, WILL TAKE HIS LIFE, unless treatments or a cure can be found in time. Thank you for providing the "Gift of Hope"
